To whom it may concern;

Kristian Bornak has been working as a real 'marketing octopus' here at FortKnoxster. Kristian is a marketing specialist who worked in most areas of our company's marketing department — and company in general.

At FortKnoxster, Kristian's project assignments were diverse and he took on the role of a project manager with enthusiasm, coordinating with our teams across the world and he delivered finished projects on time and with great results.

As a marketing generalist Kristian contributed to marketing & media efforts by writing copy, setting up campaigns, and assisting in the design and development of the look-and-feel and tone-of-voice for our platform and apps.

Kristian also worked with social media, monitoring our various social media sites and interacting with our user base, helping and informing them, building an on going relationship with the user, contributors and supporters of our platform. From the user feedback, he would coordinate with our other teams to better help meet customer needs and wishes. He was eager to learn new areas of marketing and did an excellent job at any tasks thrown at him.

As a team player, he worked well with his colleagues in marketing as well as our other teams. As a "jack of many trades" Kristian's time was divided across many responsibilities, which he executed and balanced great with a great sense of humour and professionalism.

I recommend Kristian for any position that utilizes Kristian's toolbox of skills such as project & social media management, content creation, copywriting and more. He was a really nice colleague and contributor. If you need any more background information, feel free to contact me:
